Dear Brenna,

Since Republicans will control the Iowa legislature as well as the governor's office for the next two years, and Republican politicians have gerrymandered many other states where they held a trifecta during the past decade, I am seeking comment:

Will Governor Reynolds commit to vetoing any potential legislation that would replace Iowa's non-partisan redistricting process with a process allowing the majority party to draw new political maps following the 2020 census?

Hoping to get a yes or no answer, but would be happy to publish any additional comments or clarification you may have.

Thanks,

Laurie Belin
